NATURE OF ACTION

1. This lawsuit is brought as a proposed class action against Defendants Yamashita Rubber Co., Ltd., YUSA Corporation, Tokai Rubber Industries, Ltd., DTR Industries, Inc., Bridgestone Corporation, Bridgestone APM Company, Toyo Tire & Rubber Co., Ltd., Toyo Tire North America OE Sales LLC, and Toyo Automotive Parts (USA), Inc. (all as defined below, and collectively “Defendants”) and unnamed co-conspirators, manufacturers and/or suppliers of Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts (defined below) for engaging in a long-running conspiracy to unlawfully fix, artificially raise, maintain and/or stabilize prices, rig bids for, and allocate the market and customers in the United States for Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts.

2. Plaintiffs seek to represent all persons and entities who, during the period from and including March 1, 1996 through such time as the anticompetitive effects of the Defendants' conduct ceased (the "Class Period"), purchased or leased a new vehicle in the United States not for resale which included one or more Anti-Vibration Rubber Part(s) as a component part, or indirectly purchased one or more Anti-Vibration Rubber Part(s) as a replacement part, which were manufactured or sold by the Defendants, any current or former subsidiary of the Defendants or any co-conspirator of the Defendants.

3. "Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts" are comprised primarily of rubber and metal, and are installed in suspension systems and engine mounts, as well as other parts of an automobile, to reduce engine and road vibration.

4. The Defendants manufacture, market, and sell Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts throughout and into the United States. The Defendants and other co-conspirators (as yet unknown) agreed, combined and conspired to fix, raise, maintain and/or stabilize prices, and allocate market shares for Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts.

5. The U.S. Department of Justice's ("DOJ") Antitrust Division is currently conducting a broad criminal investigation into illegal price fixing and bid-rigging in the automotive parts industry. As part of its criminal investigation, the DOJ is seeking information about unlawful anticompetitive conduct in the market for a number of different but related automotive parts, and the Federal Bureau of Investigation ("FBI") has participated in raids, pursuant to search warrants, carried out in the offices of a number of major competitors in the automotive parts industry. The automotive parts investigation is the largest criminal investigation the Antitrust Division has ever pursued, both in terms of its scope and the potential volume of commerce affected by the alleged illegal conduct. The ongoing cartel investigation of price fixing and bid-rigging in the automotive parts industry has yielded approximately $2.3 billion in criminal fines. The European Commission Competition Authority (“EC”) has also conducted dawn raids at the European offices of several automotive parts manufacturers.

6. On September 26, 2013, the DOJ announced that Yamashita Rubber Co. Ltd. had agreed to plead guilty and to pay a $11 million criminal fine for its role in a conspiracy to fix the prices of Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts installed in automobiles sold in the United States and elsewhere.

7. On November 26, 2013, the DOJ announced that Toyo Tire & Rubber Co. Ltd. had agreed to plead guilty and to pay a $120 million criminal fine for its role in two separate conspiracies to fix the prices of automotive components including Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts installed in automobiles sold in the United States and elsewhere.

8. On February 13, 2014, the DOJ announced that Bridgestone Corporation had agreed to plead guilty and to pay a $425 million criminal fine for its role in a conspiracy to fix prices of Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts installed in automobiles sold in the United States and elsewhere.

9. The Defendants and their co-conspirators participated in a combination and conspiracy to suppress and eliminate competition in the automotive parts industry by agreeing to rig bids for, and to fix, stabilize, and maintain the prices of, Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts sold to automobile manufacturers and others in the United States. The combination and conspiracy engaged in by Defendants and their co-conspirators was in unreasonable restraint of interstate and foreign trade and commerce in violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1 and state antitrust, unfair competition, and consumer protection laws.

10. As a direct result of the anti-competitive and unlawful conduct alleged herein, Plaintiffs and the Classes (as defined below) paid artificially inflated prices for Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts during the Class Period and have thereby suffered antitrust injury to their business or property.

JURISDICTION AND VENUE

11. Plaintiffs bring this action under Section 16 of the Clayton Act (15 U.S.C. § 26) to secure equitable and injunctive relief against the Defendants for violating Section 1 of the Sherman Act (15 U.S.C. § 1). Plaintiffs also assert claims for actual and exemplary damages pursuant to state antitrust, unfair competition, and consumer protection laws, and seek to obtain restitution, recover damages and secure other relief against the Defendants for violations of those state laws. Plaintiffs and the Classes also seek attorneys' fees, costs, and other expenses under federal and state law.

12. This Court has jurisdiction over the subject matter of this action pursuant to Section 16 of the Clayton Act (15 U.S.C. § 26), Section 1 of the Sherman Act (15 U.S.C. § 1), and Title 28, United States Code, Sections 1331 and 1337. This Court has subject matter jurisdiction of the state law claims pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d) and 1367, in that (i) this is a class action in which the matter or controversy exceeds the sum of $5,000,000, exclusive of interests and costs, and in which some members of the proposed Classes are citizens of a state different from the Defendants; and (ii) Plaintiffs' state law claims form part of the same case or controversy as their federal claims under Article III of the United States Constitution.

13. Venue is proper in this District pursuant to Section 12 of the Clayton Act (15 U.S.C. § 22), and 28 U.S.C. §§ 1391 (b), (c), and (d), because a substantial part of the events giving rise to Plaintiffs' claims occurred in this District, a substantial portion of the affected interstate trade and commerce discussed below has been carried out in this District, and one or more of the Defendants reside, are licensed to do business in, are doing business in, had agents in, or are found or transact business in this District.

14. This Court has in personam jurisdiction over each of the Defendants because each Defendant, either directly or through the ownership and/or control of its United States subsidiaries, inter alia: (a) transacted business in the United States, including in this District; (b) directly or indirectly sold or marketed substantial quantities of Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts throughout the United States, including in this District; (c) had substantial aggregate contacts with the United States as a whole, including in this District; or (d) were engaged in an illegal price fixing conspiracy that was directed at, and had a direct, substantial, reasonably foreseeable and intended effect of causing injury to the business or property of persons and entities residing in, located in, or doing business throughout the United States, including in this District. The Defendants also conduct business throughout the United States, including in this District, and have purposefully availed themselves of the laws of the United States.

15. The Defendants engaged in conduct both inside and outside of the United States that caused direct, substantial and reasonably foreseeable and intended anticompetitive effects upon interstate commerce within the United States.

16. The activities of the Defendants and their co-conspirators were within the flow of, were intended to, and did have, a substantial effect on interstate commerce of the United States. The Defendants' products are sold in the flow of interstate commerce.

17. Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts manufactured abroad by the Defendants and sold for use in automobiles in the United States are goods brought into the United States for sale, and therefore constitute import commerce. To the extent any Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts are purchased in the United States, and such Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts do not constitute import commerce, the Defendants' unlawful activities with respect thereto, as more fully alleged herein during the Class Period, had, and continue to have, a direct, substantial and reasonably foreseeable effect on United States commerce. The anticompetitive conduct, and its effect on United States commerce described herein, proximately caused antitrust injury to Plaintiffs and members of the Classes in the United States.

18. By reason of the unlawful activities hereinafter alleged, the Defendants substantially affected commerce throughout the United States, causing injury to Plaintiffs and members of the Classes. The Defendants, directly and through their agents, engaged in activities affecting all states, to fix, raise, maintain and/or stabilize prices, rig bids and allocate the market and customers in the United States for Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts, which conspiracy unreasonably restrained trade and adversely affected the market for Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts.

19. The Defendants' conspiracy and wrongdoing described herein adversely affected persons in the United States who purchased Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts not for resale, including Plaintiffs and members of the Classes.

FACTUAL ALLEGATIONS

A. The Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts Industry

95. "Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts" are comprised primarily of rubber and metal, and are installed in automobiles to reduce engine and road vibration. Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts are installed in suspension systems and engine mounts, as well as other parts of automobiles. See Figure 1.

96. Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts are installed by automobile original equipment manufacturers (“OEMs”) in new cars as part of the automotive manufacturing process. They are also installed in cars to replace worn out, defective or damaged Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts.

97. For new cars, the OEMs—mostly large automotive manufacturers such as Honda, Toyota, Volvo, and General Motors—purchase Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts directly from the Defendants. Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts may also be purchased by component manufacturers who then supply such systems to OEMs. These component manufacturers are also called “Tier 1 Manufacturers” in the industry. Tier 1 Manufacturers supply Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts directly to an OEM.

98. Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts are developed over a year in advance of an automobile model entering the market. Before ordering Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts for a new model, OEMs – mostly large automotive manufacturers such as Honda, Toyota, Volvo and General Motors – typically request pricing from suppliers, such as the Defendants, through Requests for Quotation (“RFQ”). Automotive parts suppliers submit quotations, or bids, to OEMs in response to RFQs, and the OEMs usually award the business to the selected automotive parts supplier for four to six years. Japanese OEMs procure parts for U.S.-manufactured vehicles both in Japan and in the United States.

99. Defendants and their co-conspirators supplied Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts to OEMs for installation in vehicles manufactured and sold in the United States and elsewhere. The Defendants and their co-conspirators manufactured Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts (a) in the United States and elsewhere for installation in vehicles manufactured and sold in the United States, (b) in the United States and elsewhere for installation in vehicles manufactured in Canada and elsewhere for export to and sale in the United States; and (b) in Japan and elsewhere for installation in vehicles manufactured in Japan and elsewhere for export to and sale in the United States.

100. Plaintiffs and members of the proposed Classes purchased Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts indirectly from one or more of the Defendants. By way of example, an owner of a vehicle may indirectly purchase one or more Anti-Vibration Rubber Part(s) from the Defendants as part of purchasing or leasing a new vehicle. An owner of a vehicle may also indirectly purchase for replacement one or more Anti-Vibration Rubber Part(s) from the Defendants when repairing a damaged vehicle or where one or more of the vehicle’s Anti-Vibration Rubber Part(s) are defective.

B. The Structure and Characteristics of the Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts Market Render the Conspiracy More Plausible

101. The structure and other characteristics of the Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts market in the United States are conducive to a price fixing agreement, and have made collusion particularly attractive in this market. Specifically, the Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts market: (1) has high barriers to entry; and (2) has inelasticity of demand.

1. The Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts Market Has High Barriers to Entry

102. A collusive arrangement that raises product prices above competitive levels would, under basic economic principles, attract new entrants seeking to benefit from the supracompetitive pricing. Where, however, there are significant barriers to entry, new entrants are less likely. Thus, barriers to entry help to facilitate the formation and maintenance of a cartel.

103. There are substantial barriers that preclude, reduce, or make more difficult entry into the Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts market. A new entrant into the business would face costly and lengthy start-up costs, including multi-million dollar costs associated with manufacturing plants and equipment, energy, transportation, distribution infrastructure, and long-standing customer relationships.

104. The Defendants own patents related to the manufacture of Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts. These patents place a significant and costly burden on potential new entrants, who must avoid infringing on the patents when entering the market with a new product.

2. There is Inelasticity of Demand for Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts

105. “Elasticity” is a term used to describe the sensitivity of supply and demand to changes in one or the other. For example, demand is said to be “inelastic” if an increase in the price of a product results in only a small decline in the quantity sold of that product, if any. In other words, customers have nowhere to turn for alternative, cheaper products of similar quality, and so continue to purchase despite a price increase.

106. For a cartel to profit from raising prices above competitive levels, demand must be relatively inelastic at competitive prices. Otherwise, increased prices would result in declining sales, revenues, and profits, as customers purchased substitute products or declined to buy altogether. Inelastic demand is a market characteristic that facilitates collusion, allowing producers to raise their prices without triggering customer substitution and lost sales revenue.

107. Demand for Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts is highly inelastic because there are no close substitutes for these products. In addition, customers must purchase Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts as an essential part of a vehicle, even if the prices are kept at a supracompetitive level.

C. Government Investigations

108. A globally coordinated antitrust investigation is taking place in the United States, Europe, and Japan, aimed at suppliers of automotive parts. A Japan Fair Trade Commission (“JFTC”) official told a leading legal publication that automotive parts supplier investigations by the JFTC, DOJ and EC would continue to widen because the automotive industry as a whole comprises many sub-industries. He characterized the investigations being conducted by the U.S., European and Japanese antitrust authorities as “large and broad,” and he declined to deny that this “would be history’s largest case.”

109. The DOJ Antitrust Division’s broad criminal investigation into illegal price fixing and bid rigging in the auto parts industry is the largest criminal investigation the Antitrust Division has ever pursued. The ongoing cartel investigation of price fixing and bid-rigging in the automobile parts industry has yielded approximately $2.3 billion in criminal fines.

110. On November 16, 2012, the DOJ announced that Hiroshi Yoshida pleaded guilty and agreed to pay a $20,000 criminal fine and serve 12 months and one day in a United States prison for his role in a conspiracy to fix prices and rig bids of Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts sold in the United States and elsewhere. Mr. Yoshida and his co-conspirators entered into and engaged in a combination and conspiracy to suppress and eliminate competition by rigging bids and fixing prices for Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts sold in the United States and elsewhere from at least as early as October 2005 and continuing until as late as June 2011 in violation of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1. Mr. Yoshida is an employee of Defendant Yamashita Rubber Co., Ltd.¹

111. According to the Information filed, Mr. Yoshida and his co-conspirators carried out the Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts conspiracy by:

(a) attending meetings and engaging in discussions in Japan concerning RFQs and prices for automobile Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts sold in the United States and elsewhere;

(b) agreeing during those meetings and discussions to allocate between the companies the supply of certain automobile Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts sold in the United States and elsewhere;

(c) agreeing to exchange prices for certain automobile Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts sold in the United States and elsewhere in accordance with the agreements reached;

(d) exchanging prices for certain automobile Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts sold in the United States and elsewhere in accordance with the agreements reached;

(e) agreeing to submit higher bids for the supply of certain automobile Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts sold in the United States and elsewhere;

(f) submitting higher bids so as not to undercut the other company's bids for the supply of certain automobile Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts sold in the United states and elsewhere in accordance with the agreements reached;

¹ See Memorandum of Law in Support of Unopposed Motion of the United States to Seal Attachment A to the Plea Agreement at 2, United States v. Yamashita Rubber Co., Ltd., Case No. 3:13-cr-00439 (N.D. Ohio Nov. 9, 2013), ECF No. 9.

(g) selling automobile Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts in the United States and elsewhere at collusive and noncompetitive prices; and

(h) accepting payment for automobile Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts sold in the United States and elsewhere at collusive and noncompetitive prices.

112. The affidavit submitted in support of the criminal complaint filed against Mr. Yoshida (the “Affidavit”) states that he conspired with employees of a company that “self-reported its anti-competitive activities to the DOJ and is cooperating with the investigation” and that “has applied for and has received conditional admission to the DOJ’s leniency program, as well as a similar leniency program in Japan.” Affidavit at ¶ 9, United States v. Yoshida, No. 12-cr-00515 (N.D. Ohio June 15, 2012), ECF No. 1-2. At a motion hearing in Yoshida, it was suggested that the company in question is Tokai Rubber Industries, Ltd. See Transcript of Motion Hearing at 15:11-16:13, United States v. Yoshida, No. 12-cr-00515 (N.D. Ohio Aug. 16, 2012), ECF No. 19.

113. The Antitrust Criminal Penalty Enhancement and Reform Act (“ACPERA”) provides leniency benefits for a participant in a price fixing conspiracy that voluntarily discloses its conduct to the Department of Justice. In most recent cases in which guilty pleas for price fixing conduct have been obtained, there has been a cooperating party that has been accepted into the DOJ’s ACPERA program as an “amnesty applicant.” One of the leniency benefits for a conspirator that is accepted into the ACPERA program is that it is not charged with a criminal offense and is not required to plead guilty to criminal charges.

114. The Affidavit contains a summary of information provided by a Tokai employee² that is illustrative of the unlawful conduct engaged in by Mr. Yoshida and his co-conspirators:

In late 2003 or early 2004 [this Tokai employee] discussed over the telephone with Yoshida their companies' price quotes to Honda for anti-vibration rubber parts for the 2006 model Honda Civic. They agreed not to lower their prices in response to requests from Honda, and not to lower their prices to obtain greater market share, unless they were able to provide to each other an engineering reason for the lower price. This market allocation and pricing agreement reduced price competition for 2006 Honda Civic parts sold in the United States to Honda by [Yamashita] and by [Tokai].

In 2008, [this Tokai employee] met with Yoshida in Japan regarding their companies' planned responses to Honda's RFQ for anti-vibration rubber parts for the 2011 model Honda Civic. (The 2007 through 2010 models used the same parts as the 2006 model.) They again agreed not to lower their prices without an engineering reason, and agreed that they would try to maintain their existing market shares for the Civic. Several months later, [this Tokai employee] and Yoshida exchanged their companies' approximate bid prices for each component over the telephone, and committed to submitting these prices to Honda. This market allocation and pricing agreement reduced price competition for 2011 Honda Civic parts sold in the United States to Honda by [Yamashita] and by [Tokai].

In 2009, [this Tokai Employee] had a discussion with Yoshida over the telephone regarding their companies' price quotes to Honda for anti-vibration rubber parts for the 2012 model Honda CR-V. [This Tokai employee] and Yoshida again agreed to try to maintain their existing market shares. To effectuate their agreement, they again shared their approximate bid prices with each other and committed to submitting those prices to Honda. This market-allocation and pricing agreement reduced price competition for 2012 Honda CR-V parts sold in the United States to Honda by [Yamashita] and [Tokai].

Affidavit at ¶ 10, United States v. Yoshida, No. 12-cr-00515 (N.D. Ohio June 15, 2012) ECF No. 1-2.

² In the Affidavit, this Tokai employee is referred to as "CW-1," Yamashita is redacted, and Tokai is referred to as "Company A."

115. Further illustrative of the Defendants' unlawful conduct are e-mails reviewed by the affiant, Special Agent Kevin Brown of the Federal Bureau of Investigation's Cleveland Unit. Special Agent Brown:

reviewed a translation of an-email sent by Hiroshi Yoshida to [this Tokai employee] on April 24, 2009. In the body of the e-mail, Yoshida states that he is informing [this Tokai employee] of [Yamashita's] response, and expresses his willingness to resubmit prices for two parts for which instructions had been received from [this Tokai employee], but where lower prices were submitted due to poor communications. . . .

reviewed a translation of the e-mail sent by [this Tokai employee] in response to Yoshida's e-mail of April 24, 2009. In the body of the e-mail, which is also dated April 24, 2009, [this Tokai employee] asks Yoshida if the price could be raised for one of the parts. . . .

reviewed a translation of an e-mail by [this Tokai employee] forwarding his/her e-mail in response to Yoshida to, among others, an employee of [Yamashita] who at the time worked at its office in the Northern District of Ohio. Attached to the e-mail, also dated April 24, 2009, is a chart containing prices identified as [Yamashita's] for various anti-vibration rubber parts for the 2011 Honda Civic, including the price of the part [this Tokai employee] asked Yoshida to raise. In the body of the e-mail, [this Tokai employee] informs the recipients of the pricing request made to Yoshida with respect to that part, and asks that [Tokai] submit a slightly lower price for another part that is included in the chart.

Id. at ¶ 12.

116. The Affidavit also states that Yoshida, in a telephone call with a separate Tokai employee,³ “described the agreement for the Honda Civic as ‘Let’s not stick out our hands to take each other’s business’” and “further described the implementation of this agreement as representatives of the companies telling each other at what price they would submit bids, and then requesting that the other submit a higher price, so that the higher bidder would not win the business.” Id. at ¶ 11.

³ In the Affidavit, the second Tokai employee is referred to as “CW-2.”

117. Furthermore, at a May 31, 2012 interview, Yoshida admitted that “regarding the 2011 Honda Civic, there were discussions and an agreement between the companies not to reduce price quotes for anti-vibration rubber parts in the absence of a valid design change or engineering change” and “they agreed not to submit prices for the 2011 Honda Civic that would be strange, drastic, or unexplainable.” Id. at ¶ 13.

118. On September 26, 2013, the DOJ announced that Yamashita Rubber Co., Ltd. had agreed to plead guilty and to pay an $11 million criminal fine for its role in a conspiracy to rig bids for, and to fix, raise and maintain the prices of Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts sold in the United States and elsewhere. Ltd. had agreed to plead guilty and to pay a $200 million criminal fine for its role in a criminal price fixing and bid-rigging conspiracy involving the sale of automotive wire harnesses and related products to automobile manufacturers.

135. In the press release announcing the fine against Furukawa Electric Co. Ltd., Sharis A. Pozen, then the Acting Assistant Attorney General in charge of the Department of Justice's Antitrust Division, said that "[a]s a result of this international price fixing and bid-rigging conspiracy, automobile manufacturers paid noncompetitive and higher prices for parts in cars sold to U.S. consumers.” Ms. Pozen also stated that “[t]his cartel harmed an important industry in our nation’s economy, and the Antitrust Division with the Federal Bureau of Investigation will continue to work together to ensure that these kinds of conspiracies are stopped.” The press release also quoted FBI’s Special Agent in Charge Andrew G. Arena, who said that “[w]hen companies partner to control and price fix bids or contracts, it undermines the foundation of the United States’ economic system,” and that “[t]he FBI is committed to aggressively pursuing any company involved in antitrust crimes.”

136. On January 30, 2012, the DOJ announced that Yazaki Corporation and DENSO Corporation had agreed to plead guilty and to pay a total of $548 million in criminal fines for their involvement in multiple price fixing and bid-rigging conspiracies in the sale of automotive parts to automobile manufacturers in the United States. According to the three-count felony charge against Yazaki, it engaged in three separate conspiracies: (i) to rig bids for and fix, stabilize and maintain the prices of automotive wire harnesses and related products; (ii) to rig bids for and fix, stabilize and maintain the prices of instrument panel clusters; and (iii) to fix, stabilize and maintain the prices of fuel senders. According to the two-count felony charge against DENSO Corporation, it engaged in conspiracies to rig bids for and to fix, stabilize and maintain the prices of electronic control units and heater control panels.

137. In the press release announcing the fines against Yazaki Corporation and DENSO Corporation, Ms. Pozen vowed to continue the investigation into “pernicious cartel conduct that results in higher prices to American consumers” In the same press release, Special Agent in Charge Andrew G. Arena said that “[t]his criminal activity has a significant impact on the automotive manufacturers in the United States, Canada, Japan and Europe and has been occurring for at least a decade. The conduct had also affected commerce on a global scale in almost every market where automobiles are manufactured and/or sold[.]”

138. Ms. Pozen said there is no doubt consumers were hurt financially by the automotive wire harness price fixing conspiracy. She further stated: “By rigging bids on wiring harnesses . . . the three companies inflated what some of their auto manufacturer clients paid, and indirectly, what consumers paid for some cars.”

145. On February 15, 2013, Scott Hammond, the Deputy Assistant Attorney General in the DOJ's Antitrust division, discussed the DOJ's ongoing automotive parts investigation in a Thomson Reuters article. He said "[t]he investigation is broader than what we've announced so far [The investigation] is still very much ongoing, but it already appears to be the biggest criminal antitrust investigation that we've ever encountered. I say the biggest with respect to the impact on U.S. businesses and consumers, and the number of companies and executives that are subject to the investigation." (emphasis added).

(c) Mitsubishi Electric Corporation agreed to plead guilty and to pay a $190 million criminal fine for its participation in a conspiracy to rig bids for, and to fix, stabilize and maintain the prices of automotive parts, including starter motors, alternators and ignition coils, sold to automobile manufacturers in the United States and elsewhere;

150. On the same day, September 26, 2013, United States Attorney General Eric Holder in the Antitrust Division presented the DOJ's most recent findings in the ongoing automotive parts investigation. He stated "[t]hese international price fixing conspiracies affected more than $5 billion in automobile parts sold to U.S. car manufacturers. In total, more than 25 million cars purchased by American consumers were affected by the illegal conduct." Holder also described how the conspiracies worked: "[c]ompany executives met face to face in the United States and Japan – and talked on the phone – to reach collusive agreements to rig bids, fix prices and allocate the supply of auto parts sold to U.S. car companies. In order to keep their illegal conduct secret, they used code names and met in remote locations. Then they followed up with each other regularly to make sure the collusive agreements were being adhered to." Attorney General Holder explained that the automotive parts conspiracies "targeted U.S. manufacturing, U.S. businesses and U.S. consumers. As a result of these conspiracies, Americans paid more for their cars."

151. The diagram below, which was prepared by the DOJ, illustrates the September 26, 2013 guilty pleas and the corresponding automotive parts to which the various manufacturers have admitted price fixing.

152. On October 9, 2013, Takata Corporation announced that it had agreed to pay $71.3 million to settle antitrust charges brought by the United States federal prosecutors for its role in a conspiracy to price fix seatbelts.

153. On November 26, 2013, the DOJ announced that Defendant Toyo Tire & Rubber Co. Ltd. had agreed to plead guilty and to pay a $120 million criminal fine for its role in two separate conspiracies to fix the prices of automotive components, one of which, the Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts price fixing conspiracy, is the subject of this complaint. The other price fixing conspiracy involved driveshaft parts installed in automobiles sold in the United States and elsewhere.

154. On November 27, 2013, the DOJ announced that Stanley Electric Co. Ltd. had agreed to plead guilty and to pay a $1.44 million criminal fine for its participation in a conspiracy to fix prices of automotive high-intensity discharge (HID) lamp ballasts installed in automobiles sold in the United States and elsewhere.

155. On January 16, 2014, the DOJ announced that Koito Manufacturing Co. Ltd. had agreed to plead guilty and to pay a $56.6 million criminal fine for its roles in separate price fixing conspiracies involving automobile lighting fixtures and automotive high-intensity discharge (HID) lamp ballasts installed in cars sold in the United States and elsewhere.

156. On February 3, 2014, the DOJ announced that Aisan Industry Co. Ltd. had agreed to plead guilty and to pay a $6.86 million criminal fine for its role in a price fixing conspiracy involving electronic throttle bodies sold to an automobile manufacturer in the United States and elsewhere.

157. On April 23, 2014, the DOJ announced that Showa Corp. agreed to plead guilty and to pay a $19.9 million criminal fine for its role in a conspiracy to fix prices and rig bids for pinion-assist type electric powered steering assemblies installed in cars sold in the United States and elsewhere.

158. To date, twenty-seven companies and thirty-five executives have been charged in the Antitrust Division's ongoing investigation into price fixing and bid rigging in the automotive parts industry. Each of the twenty-seven companies has agreed to plead guilty and altogether, they have agreed to pay approximately $2.3 billion in criminal fines. Twenty-four of the thirty-five executives have been sentenced to serve time in U.S. prisons or have entered into plea agreements.

CLASS ACTION ALLEGATIONS

159. Plaintiffs bring this action on behalf of themselves and as a class action under Rule 23(a) and (b)(2) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, seeking equitable and injunctive relief on behalf of the following class (the “Nationwide Class”):

All persons and entities who, during the Class Period, purchased or leased a new vehicle in the United States for not for resale which included one or more Anti-Vibration Rubber Part(s) as a component part, or indirectly purchased one or more Anti-Vibration Rubber Part(s) as a replacement part, which were manufactured or sold by a Defendant, any current or former subsidiary of a Defendant or any co-conspirator of the Defendants.

160. Plaintiffs also bring this action on behalf of themselves and as a class action under Rule 23(a) and (b)(3) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure seeking damages pursuant to state antitrust, unfair competition, and consumer protection laws on behalf of the following class (the “Damages Class”):

All persons and entities who, during the Class Period, purchased or leased a new vehicle in the Indirect Purchaser States⁷ not for resale which included one or more Anti-Vibration Rubber Part(s) as a component part, or indirectly purchased one or more Anti-Vibration Rubber Part(s) as a replacement part, which were manufactured or sold by a Defendant, any current or former subsidiary of a Defendant or any co-conspirator of the Defendants.

161. The Nationwide Class and the Damages Class are referred to herein as the “Classes.” Excluded from the Classes are the Defendants, their parent companies, subsidiaries and affiliates, any co-conspirators, federal governmental entities and instrumentalities of the federal government, states and their subdivisions, agencies and instrumentalities, and persons who purchased Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts directly or for resale.

162. While Plaintiffs do not know the exact number of the members of the Classes, Plaintiffs believe there are (at least) thousands of members in each Class.

163. Common questions of law and fact exist as to all members of the Classes. This is particularly true given the nature of the Defendants' and their co-conspirators' conspiracy, which was generally applicable to all the members of both Classes, thereby making appropriate relief with respect to the Classes as a whole. Such questions of law and fact common to the Classes include, but are not limited to:

(a) Whether the Defendants and their co-conspirators engaged in a combination and conspiracy among themselves to fix, raise, maintain or stabilize the prices of Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts sold in the United States;

(b) The identity of the participants of the alleged conspiracy;

(c) The duration of the alleged conspiracy and the acts carried out by the Defendants and their co-conspirators in furtherance of the conspiracy;

(d) Whether the alleged conspiracy violated the Sherman Act, as alleged in the First Claim for Relief;

(e) Whether the alleged conspiracy violated state antitrust and unfair competition law, and/or state consumer protection law, as alleged in the Second and Third Claims for Relief;

(f) Whether the conduct of the Defendants and their co-conspirators, as alleged in this Complaint, caused injury to the business or property of Plaintiffs and the members of the Classes;

(g) The effect of the alleged conspiracy on the prices of Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts sold in the United States during the Class Period;

(h) Whether Plaintiffs and the members of the Classes had any reason to know or suspect the conspiracy, or any means to discover the conspiracy;

(i) Whether the Defendants and their co-conspirators fraudulently concealed the conspiracy's existence from Plaintiffs and the members of the Classes;

(j) The appropriate injunctive and related equitable relief for the Nationwide Class; and

(k) The appropriate class-wide measure of damages for the Damages Class.

164. Plaintiffs' claims are typical of the claims of the members of the Classes, and Plaintiffs will fairly and adequately protect the interests of the Classes. Plaintiffs and all members of the Classes are similarly affected by the Defendants' wrongful conduct in that they paid artificially inflated prices for Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts purchased indirectly from the Defendants and/or their co-conspirators.

165. Plaintiffs' claims arise out of the same common course of conduct giving rise to the claims of the other members of the Classes. Plaintiffs' interests are coincident with, and not antagonistic to, those of the other members of the Classes. Plaintiffs are represented by counsel who are competent and experienced in the prosecution of antitrust and class action litigation.

166. The questions of law and fact common to the members of the Classes predominate over any questions affecting only individual members, including legal and factual issues relating to liability and damages.

167. Class action treatment is a superior method for the fair and efficient adjudication of the controversy, in that, among other things, such treatment will permit a large number of similarly situated persons to prosecute their common claims in a single forum simultaneously, efficiently and without the unnecessary duplication of evidence, effort and expense that numerous individual actions would engender. The benefits of proceeding through the class mechanism, including providing injured persons or entities with a method for obtaining redress for claims that might not be practicable to pursue individually, substantially outweigh any difficulties that may arise in the management of this class action.

168. The prosecution of separate actions by individual members of the Classes would create a risk of inconsistent or varying adjudications, establishing incompatible standards of conduct for the Defendants.

PLAINTIFFS AND THE CLASSES SUFFERED ANTITRUST INJURY

169. The Defendants' price fixing conspiracy had the following effects, among others:

(a) Price competition has been restrained or eliminated with respect to Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts;

(b) The prices of Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts have been fixed, raised, maintained, or stabilized at artificially inflated levels;

(c) Indirect purchasers of Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts have been deprived of free and open competition; and

(d) Indirect purchasers of Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts paid artificially inflated prices.

170. During the Class Period, Plaintiffs and the members of the Classes paid supracompetitive prices for Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts. These inflated prices have been passed on to them by Tier 1 Manufacturers, OEMs and dealers.

171. The markets for Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts and vehicles are inextricably linked and intertwined because the market for Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts exists to serve the vehicle market. Without the vehicles, the Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts have little to no value because they have no independent utility. Indeed, the demand for vehicles creates the demand for Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts. As stated in the 2010 Annual Report of Lear Corporation, an automotive parts supplier: “Our sales are driven by the number of vehicles produced by the automotive manufacturers, which is ultimately dependent on consumer fleet demand for automotive vehicles.”

172. Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts are identifiable, discrete physical products that remain essentially unchanged when incorporated into a vehicle. As a result, Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts follow a traceable physical chain of distribution from the Defendants to Plaintiffs and the members of the Classes, and any costs attributable to Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts can be traced through the chain of distribution to Plaintiffs and the members of the Classes.

173. Just as Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts can be physically traced through the supply chain, so can their price be traced to show that changes in the prices paid by direct purchasers of Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts affect prices paid by indirect purchasers of new motor vehicles containing Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts and Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts purchased for repair purposes.

174. While even a monopolist would increase its prices when the cost of its inputs increased, the economic necessity of passing through cost changes increases with the degree of competition a firm faces. The OEM and dealer markets for new motor vehicles are subject to vigorous price competition. The OEMs and dealers have thin net margins, and are therefore at the mercy of their component costs, such that increases in the price of components such as Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts lead to corresponding increases in prices for new motor vehicles and replacement parts at the OEM and dealer levels. When downstream distribution markets are highly competitive, as they are in the case of new motor vehicles containing Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts as components, overcharges are passed through to ultimate consumers, such as the indirect-purchaser Plaintiffs and class members.

175. Hence the inflated prices of Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts both in new motor vehicles and those purchased for repair resulting from the Defendants' and their co-conspirators' bid-rigging and price fixing conspiracy have been passed on to Plaintiffs and other class members by Tier 1 Manufacturers, OEMs and dealers.

176. The economic and legal literature has recognized that unlawful overcharges in a component normally result in higher prices for products containing that price fixed component. Two antitrust scholars – Professors Robert G. Harris (Professor Emeritus and former Chair of the Business and Public Policy Group at the Haas School of Business at the University of California at Berkeley) and the late Lawrence A. Sullivan (Professor of Law Emeritus at Southwestern Law School and author of the Handbook of the Law of Antitrust) – have observed that “in a multiple-level chain of distribution, passing on monopoly overcharges is not the exception: it is the rule.”⁸

177. As Professor Jeffrey K. MacKie-Mason (Arthur W. Burks Professor for Information and Computer Science and Professor of Economics and Public Certification), an expert who presented evidence in a number of indirect purchaser cases involving Microsoft Corporation, said (in a passage quoted in the judicial decision in that case granting class certification):

As is well known in economic theory and practice, at least some of the overcharge will be passed on by distributors to end consumers.

When the distribution markets are highly competitive, as they are here, all or nearly the entire overcharge will be passed on through to ultimate consumers. . . . Both of Microsoft's experts also agree upon the economic phenomenon of cost pass through, and how it works in competitive markets. This general phenomenon of cost pass through is well established in antitrust laws and economics as well.⁹

178. The purpose of the conspiratorial conduct of the Defendants and their co-conspirators was to raise, fix, rig or stabilize the price of Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts and, as a direct and foreseeable result, the price of new motor vehicles containing Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts and the price of Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts purchased for repair purposes. Economists have developed techniques to isolate and understand the relationship between one "explanatory" variable and a "dependent" variable in those cases when changes in the dependent variable are explained by changes in a multitude of variables, even when all such variables may be changing simultaneously. That analysis - called regression analysis - is commonly used in the real world and in litigation to determine the impact of a price increase on one cost in a product (or service) that is an assemblage of costs. Thus, it is possible to isolate and identify only the impact of an increase in the price of Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts on prices for new motor vehicles even though such products contain a number of other components whose prices may be changing over time. A regression model can explain how variation in the price of Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts affects changes in the price of new motor vehicles. In such models, the price of Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts would be treated as an independent or explanatory variable. The model can isolate how changes in the price of Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts impact the price of new motor vehicles containing Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts while controlling for the impact of other price-determining factors.

179. The precise amount of the overcharge impacting the prices of new motor vehicles containing Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts can be measured and quantified. Commonly used and well-accepted economic models can be used to measure both the extent and the amount of the supracompetitive charge passed through the chain of distribution. Thus, the economic harm to Plaintiffs and class members can be quantified.

180. In addition to the regression analysis discussed above demonstrating impact on consumers, the Department of Justice's Antitrust Division, which has been investigating anticompetitive conduct in the automotive parts industry for some time, has concluded that there is "no doubt" that consumers were hurt financially. Sharis A. Pozen, then the Acting Assistant Attorney General in charge of the Department of Justice's Antitrust Division said there is no doubt consumers were hurt financially by the automotive wire harness price fixing conspiracy. "By rigging bids . . . [automotive parts manufacturers engaged in a price fixing conspiracy] inflated what some of their auto manufacturing clients paid, and indirectly, what consumers paid for some cars," Ms. Pozen said. She also explained that "[a]s a result of this international price fixing and bid-rigging conspiracy, automobile manufacturers paid noncompetitive and higher prices for parts in cars sold to U.S. consumers." Ms. Pozen also stated that "[t]his cartel harmed an important industry in our nation's economy, and the Antitrust Division with the Federal Bureau of Investigation will continue to work together to ensure that these kinds of conspiracies are stopped." In a separate press statement, Ms. Pozen vowed to continue the investigation into "pernicious cartel conduct that results in higher prices to American consumers"

181. On February 15, 2013, Scott Hammond, the Deputy Assistant Attorney General in the DOJ's Antitrust Division, discussed the DOJ's ongoing automotive parts investigation in a Thomson Reuters article. He said "[t]he investigation is broader than what we've announced so far [The investigation] is still very much ongoing, but it already appears to be the biggest criminal antitrust investigation that we've ever encountered. I say the biggest with respect to the impact on U.S. businesses and consumers, and the number of companies and executives that are subject to the investigation." (emphasis added).

182. On September 26, 2013, United States Attorney General Eric Holder in the Antitrust Division presented the DOJ's most recent findings in the ongoing automotive parts investigation. He stated "[t]hese international price fixing conspiracies affected more than $5 billion in automobile parts sold to U.S. car manufacturers. In total, more than 25 million cars purchased by American consumers were affected by the illegal conduct." Holder also described how the conspiracies worked: "[c]ompany executives met face to face in the United States and Japan – and talked on the phone – to reach collusive agreements to rig bids, fix prices and allocate the supply of auto parts sold to U.S. car companies. In order to keep their illegal conduct secret, they used code names and met in remote locations. Then they followed up with each other regularly to make sure the collusive agreements were being adhered to." Attorney General Holder explained that the automotive parts conspiracies "targeted U.S. manufacturing, U.S. businesses and U.S. consumers. As a result of these conspiracies, Americans paid more for their cars."

183. On May 25, 2014, news sources reported that Brent Snyder, a deputy assistant attorney general in the Antitrust Division, said with respect to the automotive parts conspiracies,

“[i]t’s a very, very safe assumption that U.S. consumers paid more, and sometimes significantly more, for their automobiles as a result of this conspiracy.”

184. By reason of the violations of the antitrust laws alleged herein, Plaintiffs and the members of the Classes have sustained injury to their businesses or property, having paid higher prices for Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts than they would have paid in the absence of the Defendants’ and their co-conspirators’ illegal contract, combination, or conspiracy, and, as a result, have suffered damages in an amount presently undetermined. This is an antitrust injury of the type that the antitrust laws were meant to punish and prevent.

PLAINTIFFS’ CLAIMS ARE NOT BARRED BY THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS

A. The Statute of Limitations Did Not Begin to Run Because Plaintiffs Did Not And Could Not Discover Their Claims

185. Plaintiffs repeat and reallege the allegations set forth above.

186. Plaintiffs and the members of the Classes had no knowledge of the Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts combination or conspiracy alleged herein, or of facts sufficient to place them on inquiry notice of the claims arising from the alleged conspiracy to fix prices of Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts set forth herein, until (at the earliest), the public announcements of the government investigations began in June 2011.¹⁰

¹⁰ With respect to Defendant Toyo, Plaintiffs had no knowledge of the combination or conspiracy alleged herein, or of facts sufficient to place them on inquiry notice of the claims set forth herein, until (at the earliest), November 26, 2013, the date the DOJ announced Defendant Toyo Tire & Rubber Co. Ltd.’s anticipated guilty plea. No information in the public domain was available to the Plaintiffs and the members of the Classes prior to November 26, 2013, the date that the DOJ publicly announced Defendant Toyo Tire & Rubber Co. Ltd.’s anticipated guilty plea, that revealed sufficient information to suggest that Toyo was involved in a conspiracy to price fix Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts. Therefore, with respect to Defendant Toyo, the statute of limitations did not begin to run because Plaintiffs did not and could not discover their claims, or

187. Plaintiffs and the members of the Classes are purchasers who purchased or leased automobiles or purchased Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts to replace or repair damaged or defective Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts in their automobiles. They had no direct contact or interaction with the Defendants in this case and had no means from which they could have discovered the Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts combination and conspiracy described in this Complaint before the public announcements of the government investigations began in June 2011.

188. No information in the public domain was available to the Plaintiffs and the members of the Classes prior to the public announcements of the government investigations beginning in June 2011 that revealed sufficient information to suggest that the Defendants were involved in a criminal conspiracy to price fix and rig bids for Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts. Plaintiffs and the members of the Classes had no means of obtaining any facts or information concerning any aspect of the Defendants' dealings with Tier 1 Manufacturers, OEMs or other in the alternative, because fraudulent concealment tolled the statute of limitations, until November 26, 2013.

With respect to Defendant Bridgestone, Plaintiffs had no knowledge of the combination or conspiracy alleged herein, or of facts sufficient to place them on inquiry notice of the claims set forth herein, until (at the earliest), February 13, 2014, the date the DOJ publicly announced Defendant Bridgestone Corporation's anticipated guilty plea. No information in the public domain was available to the Plaintiffs and the members of the Classes prior to February 13, 2014, the date the DOJ publicly announced Defendant Bridgestone Corporation's anticipated guilty plea, that revealed sufficient information to suggest that Bridgestone was involved in a conspiracy to price fix Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts. Therefore, with respect to Defendant Bridgestone, the statute of limitations did not begin to run because Plaintiffs did not and could not discover their claims, or in the alternative, because fraudulent concealment tolled the statute of limitations, until February 13, 2014.

direct purchasers, much less the fact that they and their co-conspirators had engaged in the combination and conspiracy alleged herein.

189. For these reasons, the statute of limitations as to Plaintiffs' and the Classes' claims did not begin to run, and has been tolled with respect to the claims that Plaintiffs and the members of the Classes have alleged in this Complaint.

B. Fraudulent Concealment Tolled the Statute of Limitations

190. In the alternative, application of the doctrine of fraudulent concealment tolled the statute of limitations on the claims asserted herein by Plaintiffs and the Classes. Plaintiffs and the members of the Classes did not discover, and could not discover through the exercise of reasonable diligence, the existence of the Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts conspiracy alleged herein until the public announcements of the government investigations began in June 2011.¹¹

191. Before that time, Plaintiffs and the members of the Classes were unaware of the Defendants' unlawful conduct, and did not know before then that they were paying supracompetitive prices for Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts throughout the United States during the Class Period. No information, actual or constructive, was ever made available to Plaintiffs and the members of the Classes that even hinted to Plaintiffs that they were being injured by the Defendants' unlawful conduct.

192. The affirmative acts of the Defendants alleged herein, including acts in furtherance of the conspiracy, were wrongfully concealed and carried out in a manner that precluded detection.

¹¹ See supra Footnote 10.

193. Specifically, as Attorney General Holder explained in connection with the DOJ's globally coordinated investigation into price-fixing in the Automotive parts industry, "[i]n order to keep their illegal conduct secret, [Defendants] used code names and met in remote locations."

194. And, as stated in the Indictment filed against Mr. Tanaka, Mr. Ryuto and Mr. Toshida, former and current employees of Bridgestone, and the Information filed against Mr. Shimasaki, a former Bridgestone employee, the Defendants and their co-conspirators employed "measures to keep their conduct secret, including but not limited to using code words and meeting at rented conference rooms."

195. By its very nature, the Defendants' and their co-conspirators' anticompetitive conspiracy was inherently self-concealing. Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts are not exempt from antitrust regulation, and thus, before June 2011, Plaintiffs reasonably considered the Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts industry to be a competitive industry. Accordingly, a reasonable person under the circumstances would not have been alerted to investigate the legitimacy of the Defendants' Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts prices prior to the public announcements of the government investigations beginning in June 2011.

196. Plaintiffs and the members of the Classes could not have discovered the alleged contract, conspiracy or combination at an earlier date by the exercise of reasonable diligence because of the deceptive practices and techniques of secrecy employed by the Defendants and their co-conspirators to avoid detection of, and fraudulently conceal, their contract, combination or conspiracy.

197. Because the alleged Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts conspiracy was both self-concealing and affirmatively concealed by the Defendants and their co-conspirators, Plaintiffs and members of the Classes had no knowledge of the alleged conspiracy, or of any facts or information that would have caused a reasonably diligent person to investigate whether a conspiracy existed, until June 2011, when reports of the investigations into anticompetitive conduct concerning Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts were first publicly disseminated.

198. For these reasons, the statute of limitations applicable to Plaintiffs' and the Classes' claims with respect to the alleged Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts conspiracy was tolled and did not begin to run until June 2011.

FIRST CLAIM FOR RELIEF
Violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Act
(on behalf of Plaintiffs and the Nationwide Class)

199. Plaintiffs incorporate by reference the allegations in the preceding paragraphs.

200. Defendants and unnamed conspirators entered into and engaged in a contract, combination, or conspiracy in unreasonable restraint of trade in violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Act (15 U.S.C. § 1).

201. The acts done by each of the Defendants as part of, and in furtherance of, their and their co-conspirators' contract, combination, or conspiracy were authorized, ordered, or done by their officers, agents, employees, or representatives while actively engaged in the management of Defendants' affairs.

202. At least as early as March 1996, and continuing until at least the filing of this Complaint, the exact dates being unknown to Plaintiffs, Defendants and their co-conspirators entered into a continuing agreement, understanding and conspiracy in restraint of trade to artificially fix, raise, stabilize, and control prices for Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts, thereby creating anticompetitive effects.

203. The anticompetitive acts were intentionally directed at the United States market for Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts and had a substantial and foreseeable effect on interstate commerce by raising and fixing prices for Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts throughout the United States.

204. The conspiratorial acts and combinations have caused unreasonable restraints in the market for Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts.

205. As a result of Defendants' unlawful conduct, Plaintiffs and other similarly situated indirect purchasers in the Nationwide Class who purchased Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts have been harmed by being forced to pay inflated, supracompetitive prices for Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts.

206. In formulating and carrying out the alleged agreement, understanding and conspiracy, Defendants and their co-conspirators did those things that they combined and conspired to do, including but not limited to the acts, practices and course of conduct set forth herein.

207. Defendants' conspiracy had the following effects, among others:

(a) Price competition in the market for Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts has been restrained, suppressed, and/or eliminated in the United States;

(b) Prices for Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts sold by Defendants and their co-conspirators have been fixed, raised, maintained, and stabilized at artificially high, non-competitive levels throughout the United States; and

(c) Plaintiffs and members of the Nationwide Class who purchased Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts indirectly from the Defendants and their co-conspirators have been deprived of the benefits of free and open competition.

208. Plaintiffs and members of the Nationwide Class have been injured and will continue to be injured in their business and property by paying more for Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts purchased indirectly from Defendants and their co-conspirators than they would have paid and will pay in the absence of the conspiracy.

209. The alleged contract, combination, or conspiracy is a per se violation of the federal antitrust laws.

210. Plaintiffs and members of the Nationwide Class are entitled to an injunction against Defendants, preventing and restraining the violations alleged herein.

SECOND CLAIM FOR RELIEF
Violation of State Antitrust Statutes
(on behalf of Plaintiffs and the Damages Class)

211. Plaintiffs incorporate by reference the allegations in the preceding paragraphs.

212. From as early as March 1996 until at least the filing of this Complaint, Defendants and their co-conspirators engaged in a continuing contract, combination or conspiracy with respect to the sale of Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts in unreasonable restraint of trade and commerce and in violation of the various state antitrust and other statutes set forth below.

213. The contract, combination, or conspiracy consisted of an agreement among the Defendants and their co-conspirators to fix, raise, inflate, stabilize, and/or maintain at artificially supracompetitive prices for Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts and to allocate customers for Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts in the United States.

214. In formulating and effectuating this conspiracy, Defendants and their co-conspirators performed acts in furtherance of the combination and conspiracy, including:

(a) participating in meetings and conversations among themselves in the United States and elsewhere during which they agreed to price Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts at certain levels, and otherwise to fix, increase, inflate, maintain, or stabilize effective prices paid by Plaintiffs and members of the Damages Class with respect to Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts sold in the United States;

(b) allocating customers and markets for Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts in the United States in furtherance of their agreements; and

(c) participating in meetings and conversations among themselves in the United States and elsewhere to implement, adhere to, and police the unlawful agreements they reached.

215. The Defendants and their co-conspirators engaged in the actions described above for the purpose of carrying out their unlawful agreements to fix, maintain, decrease, or stabilize prices and to allocate customers with respect to Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts.

216. The Defendants' anticompetitive acts described above were knowing, willful and constitute violations or flagrant violations of the following state antitrust statutes.

217. The Defendants have entered into an unlawful agreement in restraint of trade in violation of the Arizona Revised Statutes, §§ 44-1401, et seq.

(a) The Defendants' and their co-conspirators' combinations or conspiracies had the following effects: (1) Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts price competition was restrained, suppressed, and eliminated throughout Arizona; (2) Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts prices were raised, fixed, maintained and stabilized at artificially high levels throughout Arizona; (3) Plaintiffs and members of the Damages Class were deprived of free and open competition; and

(4) Plaintiffs and members of the Damages Class paid supracompetitive, artificially inflated prices for Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts.

(c) As a direct and proximate result of Defendants' unlawful conduct, Plaintiffs and members of the Damages Class have been injured in their business and property and are threatened with further injury.

(d) By reason of the foregoing, Defendants entered into agreements in restraint of trade in violation of Ariz. Rev. Stat. §§ 44-1401, et seq. Accordingly, Plaintiffs and members of the Damages Class seek all forms of relief available under Ariz. Rev. Stat. §§ 44-1401, et seq.

218. The Defendants have entered into an unlawful agreement in restraint of trade in violation of the California Business and Professions Code, §§ 16700, et seq.

(a) During the Class Period, the Defendants and their co-conspirators entered into and engaged in a continuing unlawful trust in restraint of the trade and commerce described above in violation of Section 16720, California Business and Professions Code. The Defendants have acted in violation of Section 16720 to fix, raise, stabilize, and maintain prices of, and allocate markets for, Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts at supracompetitive levels.

(b) The aforesaid violations of Section 16720, California Business and Professions Code, consisted, without limitation, of a continuing unlawful trust and concert of action among the Defendants and their co-conspirators, the substantial terms of which were to fix, raise, maintain, and stabilize the prices of, and to allocate markets for, Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts.

(c) For the purpose of forming and effectuating the unlawful trust, the Defendants and their co-conspirators have done those things which they combined and conspired to do, including but in no way limited to the acts, practices and course of conduct set forth above and the following: (1) Fixing, raising, stabilizing, and pegging the price of Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts; and (2) Allocating among themselves the production of Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts.

(d) The combination and conspiracy alleged herein has had, inter alia, the following effects: (1) Price competition in the sale of Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts has been restrained, suppressed, and/or eliminated in the State of California; (2) Prices for Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts sold by the Defendants and their co-conspirators have been fixed, raised, stabilized, and pegged at artificially high, non-competitive levels in the State of California and throughout the United States; and (3) Those who purchased Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts directly or indirectly from the Defendants and their co-conspirators have been deprived of the benefit of free and open competition.

(e) As a direct and proximate result of the Defendants' unlawful conduct, Plaintiffs and members of the Damages Class have been injured in their business and property in that they paid more for Anti-Vibration Rubber Parts than they otherwise would have paid in the absence of the Defendants' unlawful conduct. As a result of the Defendants' violation of Section 16720 of the California Business and Professions Code, Plaintiffs and members of the Damages Class seek treble damages and their cost of suit, including a reasonable attorney's fee, pursuant to Section 16750(a) of the California Business and Professions Code.

219. The Defendants have entered into an unlawful agreement in restraint of trade in violation of the District of Columbia Code Annotated §§ 28-4501, et seq.
